Unlocking energy investment in private houses

Up-scaling investments in energy efficiency and renewable energies building to a main challenge in most ESIIF EU targets. National, regional and local administrations have to innovate in the application of public funds in order to stimulate the private sector to invest in energy efficiency and other actions, such as more complex financial instruments (FIs), as regional authorities have a key role in the design of support policies which are proving more cost-effective.

Unfortunately, most of FIs and public incentives are currently used with non-retailable grant systems. Non-retailable grants are less effective than subsidies compared to other actions, such as more complex financial instruments (FIs), as regional authorities have a key role in the design of support policies which are proving more cost-effective.

European region is cooperating 23 FIs initiatives for the promotion of FIs for energy renovation of buildings. These actions are supported by the European Regional Development Fund supported by ESIIF. This initiative, called FINERPOL, is funded by Interreg Europe Programme with 1,9M€ ESIIF.

The use of FIs especially ESIIF for the promotion of new technologies in buildings is a main challenge for the current period 2014-2020. Especially when regions try to combine these FIs with other ESI IF funding initiatives, such as Cohesion Fund, and other EU funds, through public-private partnerships, by involving private financial institutions in the risk.

FINERPOL was launched a pilot FI in September 2017, for the promotion of energy efficiency measures which have been identified in the ex ante assessment as a best investment with a market potential higher than 70M€.

La Comisión aprueba una nueva iniciativa para promover la rehabilitación energética en Extremadura

Extremadura cuenta con una nueva iniciativa para promover el sector de la rehabilitación energética de edificios, desde el punto de vista de solventar sus necesidades de financiación. Representantes de Extremadura y de administraciones de Gran Bretaña, Dinamarca, Suecia, Francia, Bélgica, Letonia, Italia y Chipre han trabajado en las reuniones que se han celebrado en Madrid para definir las mejores herramientas financieras que pueden promoverse en Europa para asegurar que la financiación llega al mercado.

Esta iniciativa acaba de comenzar y pretende romper las barreras técnicas y financieras que impiden el pleno desarrollo del sector de la rehabilitación energética en Europa. Para conseguirlo la Comisión ha financiado estas regiones con 2 millones de euros a través del programa de investigación Horizonte 2020, dentro del proyecto REINVENT, para que sirvan de ejemplo en el desarrollo de financiación específica para la rehabilitación energética de viviendas privadas.

En estas primeras jornadas de trabajo, las regiones más avanzadas han explicado qué herramientas están funcionando ya en sus territorios: Letonia expuso los detalles de su fondo de inversión para comunidades de vecinos, con financiación blanda, que ya ha movilizado más de 35 millones de euros de forma positiva. Dinamarca expuso su modelo de comercialización a través de banca privada, apoyada por financiación europea, que pretende alcanzar un impacto de 250 millones de euros.
