¡¡ AGUA VÁ !!

Water goes !

La locución alude a la costumbre antigua de vaciar bacines y orinales por balcones y ventanas en una época en que no existía el retrete ni el agua corriente en las casas y las poblaciones no contaban con sistema de alcantarillado. Por las mañanas, las amas de casa recogían los recipientes de su vivienda y vaciaban su líquido contenido a la calle, tras el grito de aviso de: ¡Agua va...! Con ello se ponía sobreaviso a los posibles transeúntes del peligro inminente de recibir una indeseada ducha.

The phrase refers to the ancient custom of emptying potties and urinals by balconies and windows at a time when there was no toilet or running water in the houses and the towns did not have a sewer system.

In the mornings, the housewives picked up the containers of their house and emptied their liquid content into the street, after the cry of warning: Agua va ...! This was to give notice to potential passersby of the imminent danger of receiving an unwanted shower.
