#EURegionsWeek

Ecosystem services are the benefits humankind obtains from the workings of the natural world and constitute the natural base for economic prosperity and quality of life

Though our wellbeing relies upon these ecosystem services, they are mainly public goods with no markets and no prices, so are rarely considered.

With this final aim in mind, we present and discuss different Good Practices in relation to the measurement of their costs and benefits, their horizontal integration into sectoral policies, payment for ecosystem services, and their management.
