Online - Alzira 28/6/2022

Introduction

The COVID-19 pandemic has disrupted the activities of museums around the world, threatening their financial survival as well as the livelihoods of thousands of museum professionals.

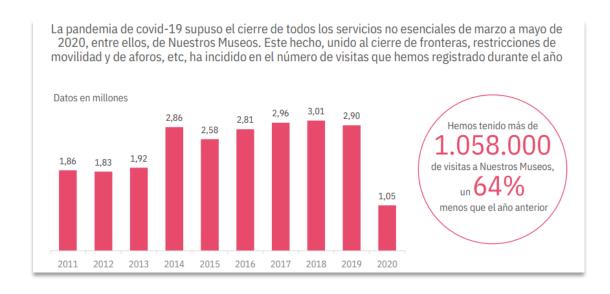

International Council of Museums (ICOM): During the closure, many museums increased their digital activities. Although almost half of the respondents answered that their museum was already present on social media or shared its collections online before the closures, the digital communication activities analyzed by the ICOM survey increased for at least 15% of the museums and, in particular, social media activities increased for more than half of them.

Introduction

According to the ICOM, almost all museums reduced their activities due to the consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic.

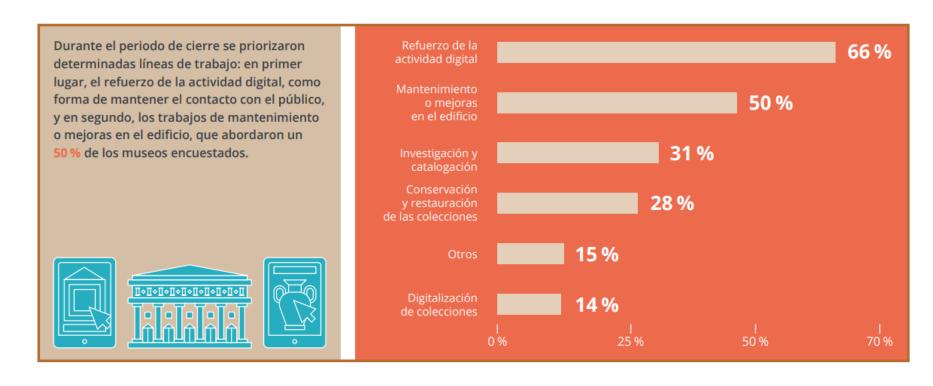

In our country, as well as in many others, an important number of museums reduced their staff and many of them may have been forced to close permanently.

The number of visits to museums fell by 64% during the first year of the pandemic.

Introduction

During the first year of closure, certain lines of work were prioritized, including the reinforcement of their digital activity to maintain contact between the museums and their public.

How did the Covid-19 crisis affect cultural institutions' usual work with visitors?

Some brief examples of 'good practices' linked in particular to the digitization of museums

The Alzira Town Council, together with the Mancomunitat de la Ribera Alta (MANRA), presented the digitization project of the MUMA. It is the creation of interactive virtual visits that allow visitors to view all its facilities in full.

The project was launched in February 2020, just before the pandemic's start, to reinvent the museum as a tool for cultural exchange.

Municipal Museum of Alzira (MUMA)

The virtual tour, available in 3 languages, included 80 textual information points, a dozen 3D elements, 200 detailed photographs, and several videos provided by the City Council itself.

Museu Valencià de la Festa (Algemesí)

As we mentioned in a previous presentation, the Museu de la Festa of Algemesí tripled the number of virtual visits during the confinement thanks to the work of digitalization of its spaces carried out by 'Riberana':

- Panoramic views
- 360-degree videos
- Photographs
- Contextual information
- 3D models

Following the reopening of the museums, campaigns were carried out to reactivate visits, especially on social networks (76%) and web portals (54%).

La actividad digital ha sido una línea de trabajo importante, tanto durante el cierre, cuando los museos la han utilizado como herramienta para mantener el contacto con el público, como para favorecer la reapertura, a través de campañas en su web o redes sociales, así como con el museo nuevamente abierto.

Digital activity has been an important line of work both during the closure and after the reopening to maintain contact and interaction with the public. 68% of the museums have increased the materials available online, where social networks have been the main protagonists. Many campaigns for citizen interaction have been launched (Example: Museu de la Festa, Algemesí).

El Real Decreto 463/2020 de 14 de marzo, por el que se declara el estado de alarma para la gestión de la crisis sanitaria, supuso la suspensión de la apertura al público de los locales y establecimientos no esenciales, entre ellos los museos, que permanecieron cerrados una media de hasta su reapertura. El número de días de cierre varía mucho de unos museos a otros: oscila entre los 63 días del museo que pudo abrir antes, y los 243 del que lo hizo más tarde.

- Museums were closed for an average of 91 days.
- 96% reopened after closure, although 30% reopened with restrictions.
- 31% of the museums that reopened had to close again for reasons related to the pandemic.

Further measures

After the closure, almost all museums that reopened took special measures to make visits safer: capacity control and social distancing, bubble groups, use of disinfectants, posters with prevention signs, differentiation between the entrance and exit route, audio-visual materials (audioguides, QR codes, etc.).

Further measures

Tras la reapertura de la mayoría de museos en el mes de junio, se tomaron medidas para garantizar la seguridad de la visita y para fomentarla

After the reopening of the museums and the implementation of measures to encourage visits and their security, the percentage of the public entering free of charge increased. Most of the visitors were from the local area (60%).

Some thoughts

Museu de la Festa (Algemesí)

- ► In general, the security and conservation of museum heritage continued during the pandemic.
- ► The forced closure of museums and the impossibility of accommodating their audiences during the confinement suddenly brought digital communication activities to the forefront. We witnessed a surge of virtual visits, social media postings, interactions with the public at a distance, and much more. Museums highlighted campaigns and actions carried out through social media.
- ▶ While these demonstrations show the reactivity and creativity that characterize the sector and its capacity to adapt to crises, they also reveal some structural weaknesses affecting cultural institutions in terms of resources and staff dedicated to digital communication and in the level of maturity of the content produced.
- ► Museums support the need for governments to provide a strong response to secure the future of museums and the invaluable cultural heritage they hold, which is an essential part of the identity of peoples and nations and a vital element of the communities they serve.
